

Data Breach: Understanding the Risk and Managing a Crisis

Seminar Overview

In the last decade, the business world has been transformed by the availability of an overwhelming amount of information. The collection of personal information and dependence on systems creates an obligation of companies to protect the personal information of their customers, employees, and partners.

When a data breach occurs, the reputation and financial stability of your organization is at stake. As a key decision maker, you will need to respond to the media and regulatory agencies, and provide a comprehensive solution to victims – whether they are customers, patients or employees – in order to protect your organization from frivolous litigation, government investigations, regulatory fines and damaged reputation.

Join Marsh, sister company Kroll and Taft Stettinius & Hollister LLP for an interactive session that will review privacy and cyber risk exposures and outline strategies for prevention, response, and recovery.

What To Expect

This seminar is designed to improve your understanding of the strategies your company should consider to avoid a data security breach and prepare for the possibility of one occurring including:

- Protecting your brand and reputation;
- Risk exposure and insurance coverage;
- Legal perspective;
- Responding to a data breach; and
- Positioning your organization in the eyes of regulators, media, shareholders, and victims.

Who Should Attend

- Financial Executives including Chief Financial Officers, Treasurers and Controllers
- Risk Managers
- General Counsel
- Chief Information Officers
